

The University of Tokyo Undergraduate Program Information Seminar

Saturday, 8 September, 2012

Seoul, Korea

The University of Tokyo will be launching two new undergraduate programs taught entirely in English, starting in October of 2012, called PEAK (Programs in English at Komaba). One is on East Asian Studies and the other focuses on Environmental Sciences. Both result in a Bachelor's degree and prior knowledge of Japanese language is not required. Generous merit-based scholarships are available.

The PEAK Undergraduate Admissions Office invites you to join an introductory seminar on PEAK to be held in Seoul with the support of the Embassy of Japan. This seminar is designed especially for Korean students, their parents and high school teachers/college counselors. At the seminar, the university representatives will provide you with comprehensive information about PEAK, including admission procedures for 2013 enrollment.
